Hersey 5 Cent Chocolate Bar

The Hershey's 5-cent chocolate bar is an iconic piece of American confectionery history. Introduced by Milton Hershey in 1900, it was one of the first mass-produced chocolate bars in the United States. Hershey's innovation lay in making milk chocolate affordable and accessible to the average person, which was previously considered a luxury item.

The original Hershey's Milk Chocolate bar was sold for 5 cents and became immensely popular due to its great taste and affordability. Over the years, the packaging and marketing evolved, but the bar remained a staple in American households.

However, the 5-cent bar was discontinued on November 24, 1969.

Hershey's legacy continues with a wide range of chocolate products, but the 5-cent bar remains a nostalgic symbol of the brand's beginnings.
